WOMAN

Her Essence 4

Her Presence 20

The Individuals 128

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro

Greensboro
North Carolina

*THIS WOMAN, this creature we are . . . our Essence . . .
And all the wonderful and terrible things that are part of us.
What? None of us knows for sure.
But we glimpse . . .
We reach out for the security of men who love us,
Or say they do,
And give love lavishly . . . and often, foolishly.*

*IT TAKES SO LITTLE to make us happy,
The quiet pleasures and the boisterous,
The good feeling of all the world's lovely things.*

477239

AFFECTION . . . dogs and small animals . . .

*Why so seldom to our Fellow man, where it is so much greater?
Why so much love of self,
Our own prettiness and pettiness?*

*WE ARE SO MUCH AFRAID; we
Run and run to find the security
We cannot find outside.
Our reflection gives us no peace;
We search for it in marriage,
In God, and
Our own private gods.*

*WE SEARCH for ourselves,
All the pieces and parts of ourselves;
Where do we belong, we women?
What are the words to put us together,
Make us a unit,
Strong, sure, peaceful?*

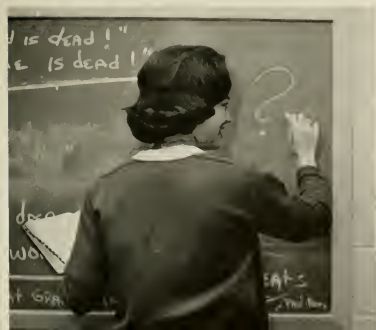

WE LOOK SO MANY PLACES . . .

*In books, in expressions
Of beauty and serenity,
In all the outer trappings of Group security.
We find part of us there. Part.*

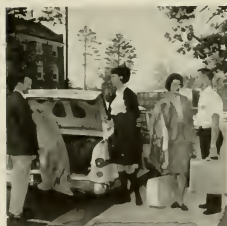

*AFTER THE BOOKS, we must find
The larger framework
Wherein our existence has meaning,
Take the small pieces we have found
And try them out somewhere else . . .*

*WOMAN created from and for man, we are told.
 And so we look to them for ourselves,
 We find a kind of peace, a beauty, a gold,
 And the metallic aftertaste, an emptiness,
 An excitement, a fear . . .
 What we are? None of us knows for sure.
 But we glimpse . . .*

The magic of HER PRESENCE is a purpose and a smile, her purpose not motivated by selfishness, nor her smile by falseness. This woman that we are is a friend, consoler, judge, counselor, roommate, a helper when we need her, an enemy when we abuse her, and a seeker of knowledge and love. She is something different to everyone, and something special to someone. She is primarily a student of life who is able to find truth in a dorm or a classroom and willing to share her time, her energy, and her heart. The magic of her presence is herself.

Moving in — with trunks,
boxes, and those little items that defy packing.

What is a room without a congenial roommate?

Arrival Is The First Difficult Step Toward A Crowded, Friendly Room

Arrival on campus is, in one word, Chaos! It is the culmination of weeks and months of preparation and expectation. Abruptly, the campus becomes a model of disorder as an endless line of cars unloads mountains of boxes and luggage into the dorms. Once there it is forgotten as the new roommates welcome each other and discuss the adventures of the summer. Finally, all the hello's are said, the unpacking done, the room arranged, and the parents on their way; we settle down to enjoy our new room, new roommate, and our new status. We begin a new year at UNC-G.

"Maybe if we come back next week . . ."

Long Lines And Conflicting Schedules Frustrate Registering Students

Registration can be best described as the "Reign of Confusion." It is a process during which we stand in line for two hours to get an IBM card that shows us we are in the wrong course at the wrong time. Coming at the end of the semester, it serves as a preview of the informative and necessary, but often unpleasant, courses required of us all. Registration is, in reality, more than all this — it is the growing conviction that we are going slowly but surely out of our minds, and the still small hope that maybe next semester it will be better.

Yes, Virginia, you do have to have your master card.

There really must be an easier way.

But if I switch from tennis . . . take English 101 at . . .
then I'll get Dr. Luczynski for history!

"Lean against the number . . .
and don't smile."

But I don't own a white,
lie-flat-collar blouse!

Oh, for the good ole barefoot summer!

Excited and bewildered Freshmen meet the campus through their Junior Assistants.

First Classes, Like First Dates, Are Exciting And Painful

Classes begin; the formless excitement and expectation are soon channeled in the direction of hard work. The thrill of that first college class is not forgotten, but we settle down to the discipline of studying. We realize that this education is showing how little we know and making us long to know more. We begin our university careers; we also begin to turn into reality our plans and dreams for the future.

ART

Gilbert Carpenter Arrives From Hawaii To Head Art Department

Art majors learn the details of sculpture under the supervision of Mr. Vevers.

Art 101 students experiment with the theories of color and line in their study of basic design.

Weatherspoon Art Gallery presents a varied program of exhibitions throughout the year.

Well-known Japanese artist Un'ichi Hiratsuka sketches Elliott Hall's terrace for which he has been commissioned to do a wood block.

Art Club membership serves as salesgirls for the department's Flea Market.

The creative atmosphere of the Art Department provides an excellent opportunity for its students offering courses to undergraduates in design, color, lettering, interior design, textiles, and architectural design. Weatherspoon Gallery, one of the leading art facilities in the south, stresses the acquisition of contemporary works of art in all media. Visiting artists such as William Zorach and Un'ichi Hiratsuka provided additional perspective for students this year.

Opportunities for art majors are unrestricted. Employment possibilities include newspaper and magazine advertising, illustration, window display, and exhibition designing. A student with a major in Art History and Interpretation can gain employment as a curator for a museum or art library. Those who wish to teach primary or secondary schools are also given electives to fulfill their requirements.

The Art Club is open to all students at UNC-G. Its purpose is to give interested individuals the opportunity to meet for sharing of opinions and experiences in a common field. In so doing, it sponsors Sunday afternoon Folk Sings as well as the Annual Student Art Exhibit.

MUSIC

School Of Music Offers Variety In Undergraduate Study

UNC-G's School of Music, a member of the National Association of Schools of Music, offers programs of study leading to three degrees: Bachelor of Music, Bachelor of Arts with a major in music, and Master of Education in Music Education. Within these three degrees are several options, allowing a major to specialize in whatever field of music is most appropriate for her. Practical experience is made available through the college orchestra, choir, glee club, band, and other smaller ensembles.

University Ensembles

Aycock Auditorium in November.

ive Music Students Practical Experience And Provide Entertainment

In addition to providing an excellent musical education for its majors, the School of Music contributes greatly to campus entertainment and edification. The College Choir presents concerts to the student body, notably the annual Christmas concert, always well-received. The University's Glee Club specializes in more secular works, and often combines with groups from other colleges and universities in performances. Another series of presentations, sponsored by the School of Music is that of the Civic Music Programs. These are open to all students and sponsor either touring professional talent or resident musicians.

The UNC-G Glee Club's Christmas Concert, directed by William DeVeny, presented secular and religious music of the season.

Mr. Richard Cox directs the College Choir in the Benjamin Britten Carols for the annual Christmas concert.

DRAMA AND SPEECH

Drama Department Brings National Repertory Theatre To Campus

Ring Around the Moon, second premiere of National Repertory's '63-'64 season, captivated a capacity crowd.

Farley Granger and Anne Meacham play the major roles.
John and Elizabeth Procter, in Arthur Miller's The Crucible.

The UNC-G Theatre, the Lecture-Entertainment Committee of the University, and The American National Theatre and Academy brought the National Repertory Theatre to Aycock Auditorium in October for a two-week "in-residence" period. The group members presented class lectures in the fields of art, English, sociology, home economics, and music as well as in those directed to drama and speech majors. A Tuesday Tea was given in honor of the visiting artists, who received a warm and interested response from the students.

Eva La Galliene, Farley Granger, and Anne Meacham starred in the three productions: Chekov's The Sea Gull, Anouilh's Ring Around the Moon, and Arthur Miller's The Crucible. The plays were open to state and local residents as well as to UNC-G students, and received excellent reviews. Opening night was distinguished by a congratulatory telegram from the late President Kennedy.

All productions have a beginning: UNC-G shows start with open try-outs.

The Theatre of UNC-G opened its '63-'64 season with Shakespeare's Midsummer's Night's Dream.

UNC-G Theatre Presents 1963-64 Season Of First Experiences, Plays

Opening the season, Shakespeare's Midsummer's Night's Dream was a first in many ways. It was the campus' first Shakespeare in many years, and our first pleasant look at the work of Mr. James P. Rose, the theatre's new designer. The Nativity, directed by Miss Kathryn England, gave us our first introduction to the vitality of medieval drama. The final first of the year was the world premiere of Mary George's original play, One Dilemma, Deviled Please, directed by Susie Newman under the supervision of Mr. Maynard French. As an educational theatre the UNC-G organization experienced quite a successful year.

The Nativity portion of the Wakefield Cycle Mystery plays, written about 1000 A.D., followed Midsummer on the theatre schedule.

Stage managers occupy the most responsible and demanding position in UNC-G theatre.

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins demonstrates the fundamentals of speech for her students.

Speech Department Introduces Inter-Collegiate Debate Program

There are three sequences in the Department of Drama and Speech: theatre, general speech, and speech correction. In the speech department, oral communication tests are given to freshmen in an effort to survey all in-coming students and to acquaint them with their problems. Students with speech difficulties are requested to take a general speech course. The department's laboratory has individual rooms, well equipped with tape recorders. Affiliated with the Speech Department is the introduction of inter-collegiate debating at UNC-G. One topic for debate this year concerned the federal government's allowing equal college opportunities to all qualified high school graduates. The members of the UNC-G debate team attended tournaments in neighboring states and contests in other parts of the country. In the coming years more active programs are planned as interest in debating increases.

Members of the newly formed Debate Team search for arguments to help them win.

Closed-Circuit Television Proves Useful For Demonstration Purposes

The second year of a closed-circuit television system on this campus for demonstration purposes has proved that the system is a good one. Not only has the Psychology Department found it to be helpful during a second year of use, but the closed-circuit television system has been expanded for use in some professional education courses. Operating under the same regulations as the commercial stations, though without advertising, it also gives students valuable experiences in the medium of communications.

Program Director

Closed-Circuit television presents Dr. Richard Bardolph, head of the History Department, discussing the "Social History of the United States Since 1865."

English Department Offers Interesting Fields For All Students

The reference files of the library are invaluable for research on term papers.

English as a language, and in all forms of literature, occupies one of the largest positions in the UNC-G curriculum. The department's program offers material from all possible angles on every academic level from freshman through senior. New in the department this year is a program for graduate students who may specialize in any field represented on the university's staff, including the growing field of creative writing. New this year, too, is a one-semester course in journalism taught by the associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News, William Snider.

Randall Jarrell and Robert Watson form the staff nucleus of the creative writing program at UNC-G.

Literature courses require many hours of outside reading, and again students turn to the library.

GERMAN AND RUSSIAN

German And Russian Departments Promote Conversational Facility

Students taking German find that use of the language is not limited to classroom hours; professors meet students weekly at the dining hall, and during the meal everyone converses in German. For the third year some majors have participated in the Junior Year at Heidelberg Program, returning with a fluent speaking knowledge of the language.

The most distinctive aspect of the Russian Department is its accent on the spoken language. Courses emphasize the basic principles of grammar and conversation, and include the reading of selected texts from nineteenth and twentieth century literature.

Pam Pfaff serves tea from a souvenir of her summer's study tour in Russia.

German Club members and professors join in on a German song during one of their monthly meetings.

M. Jean-Paul Koenig speaks informally to members of Le Cercle Francais.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES

Professors' Backgrounds Prove Asset To French, Spanish Students

Perhaps the major asset to the students of languages at UNC-G is the background of the professors. Most members of these departments are natives of the country whose tongue is presented in their course. This is invaluable in the learning of a spoken language since actual conversation requires a phrasing drawn from life rather than a textbook. The department sponsors two clubs designed for all students of these languages. Le Cercle Francais and El Circulo Hispanico provide an association of like interests and training. Through the establishment of a series of sequences in both French and Spanish, students majoring in these languages find their work made more purposeful and definite. The series includes the literary sequence, the teaching sequence, and the commercial sequence. Dr. Charles Blend, head of the department, published this year a study of Andre Malraux: Tragic Humanist which received excellent reviews; this is again an indication of the high quality of instruction available in romance languages on this campus.

Students and faculty maintain and enjoy the Romance Languages Bulletin board.

Dr. John W. Kennedy and the Political Economy Club combine a discussion group with a party at the December meeting.

ECONOMICS

Two New Courses Add Interest And Strength To Economics

Showing a rapid growth in the number of majors during the past two years, this department anticipates that increasing interest will be shown by undergraduate men when they enroll next fall. The staff consists of experienced teachers, who are research-minded and actively engaged in both publishing and consulting. The introduction of two new courses — Economics and Business Statistics, and Economic Development — help to give added strength to this liberal education major which provides excellent preparation for graduate study and careers in the business world.

GEOGRAPHY

Faculty Research Proves Valuable Asset To Geography Students

The Department of Geography acquired this year a collection of raised relief maps for laboratory study; these are an invaluable asset to those courses dealing with the actual physical appearance of the earth's surface.

Various faculty members in the department recently engaged in research projects involving sugar cane production in southern Florida, settlement of new lands in Latin America, and climatology of Michigan.

Raised relief maps (left) are a great improvement over flat maps (right) in the study of physical geography.

HISTORY AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

Social Science Forum Brings Associate Justice Goldberg To Campus

The Department of History and Political Science can again point to the high caliber of its faculty as the number of doctoral degrees rose to fifteen this year; three faculty members have submitted manuscripts to the publishers, and two others have books near completion. Offering a strong major to its students on both the graduate and the undergraduate levels, this department does much to prepare its students for successful careers after graduation.

The Harriett Elliott Lectures, spearheaded by the Social Science Forum Committee, has in the past brought outstanding as well as interesting speakers to campus, and this year proved no exception; the lectures were delivered by Supreme Court Associate Justice Arthur Goldberg on the Rights of the People, State, and Nation. The body of his lectures was concerned with constitutional law, and at the end of each one a question and answer period was open to the students and audience in general.

SOCIOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY

Man's Background And Social Relations Concern Sociology Students

Studying the human animal in all its ramifications and group particulars, students in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology gain a wide, invaluable knowledge of the whys and wherefores of social behavior. Sociology is a field concentrating on the interactions of individuals in their daily lives, while Anthropology studies the history of man, the ways and stages of his development. The Sociology Club carries these elements outside the academic situation; its membership is devoted to a study of the department's principles, and it provides a social environment of companionship for its members.

Arctic life is explained to anthropology students by their professors through the use of models.

Among the prominent Philosophy Club speakers for the year was Dr. David Falk formerly from the University of Syracuse and now the new Chairman of Philosophy at UNC-Ch.

PHILOSOPHY

Philosophy Dept. Expands To Meet Students' Needs, Desires

In the second year of its major program, the Department of Philosophy continues to sponsor a series of lectures by prominent philosophers. With a growing number of students, the recently expanded department feels the need on this campus for students desiring a course in which they may organize their own thoughts and, ultimately, their own philosophy of living. It is the feeling of the department that exposure to all major avenues of philosophical study should be opened to the student in order to facilitate this task.

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION

Latin Students Observe Vergil's 2000th Birthday

Through such courses as Mythology, Greek, Latin, and World Types of the Drama, the Classical Civilization Department teaches the language and literature of Greece and Early Rome.

A new course offered in the department this year concerns the history and politics of Julius Caesar's era and is taught by Miss Meriwether.

On October 15th, Latin students celebrated Vergil's 2000th birthday, complete with a cake.

Faculty and Student Honors Council Members — (seated) Dr. Richard Bardolph, Dr. Anne Lewis, Dr. David Davies, Chairman of Faculty Council, Dr. Joseph Bryant, Dr. Laura Anderton, Mr. Gilbert Carpenter: (standing) Judy Gilmore, Genny Gaither, Kaye Taylor, Pam Pfaff, Chairman of Student Council.

The Freshman Honors Group was composed of seventy students who met in small groups and studied great books and ideas; directing the group was Dr. Elaine Burgess of the Sociology Department.

HONORS PROGRAM

Council Sponsors Honors Convocation

In the fall of 1963, a Student Honors Council, consisting of two honors students from each class, was created to complement the functions of the Faculty Honors Council, headed by Dr. David G. Davies. The main purpose of the Student Council is to coordinate, from a student viewpoint, the activities of the four honors groups, both individually and collectively. The Council was active in the planning of special receptions in honor of Dr. William Poteat, and Dr. Cornelius Kruse, former UNC-G visiting professor, who returned to the campus for a week this spring. The main project of the group was an extensive evaluation program conducted in the four honors groups. In May the Faculty and Student Honors Council presented the Honors Day Convocation with Dr. Poteat as the guest speaker.

Junior Honors Seminar under the direction of Dr. William Poteat, professor from Duke Divinity School, had as its topic this year, "Romanticism, Nihilism, and the Beyond."

CHEMISTRY

National Science Foundation Grants Funds For Research Equipment

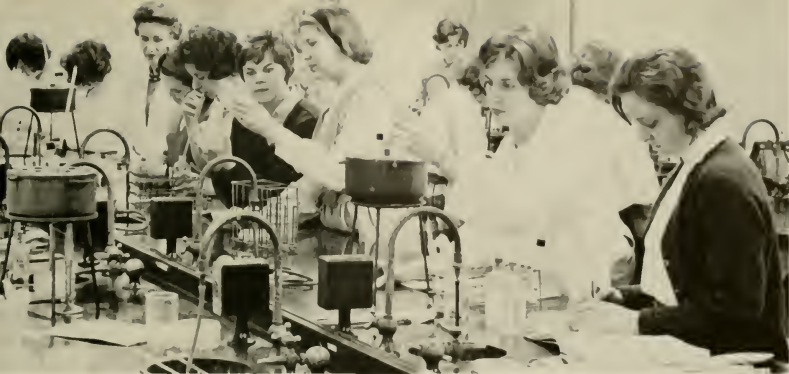

The Chemistry Department of UNC-G received a grant of $7,500 from the National Science Foundation under their Undergraduate Instructional Scientific Program, matched by an equal amount from the state for the purchase of equipment for the purpose of improving undergraduate instruction. Analytical and nuclear equipment as well as teaching models were bought from these funds. The chief item in the first category is an infrared spectrophotometer with accessories, one of the modern tools of chemistry used for the purpose of identifying compounds on the basis of their response to infrared radiation. This represents a much quicker method of identifying compounds, and makes it possible to do so with much smaller quantities of materials than the traditional methods. Among the nuclear equipment are included a portable survey meter and a radionuclide set; the teaching models are atomic and are used to demonstrate the configuration of various kinds of molecules. The acquisition of these modern research tools will enable future chemistry students to explore their individual fields even more thoroughly.

The flame and the culture dish serve as primary tools even for the beginning chemistry student.

Long hours of individual experimentation and research are involved in the chemistry major's curriculum.

General Chemistry courses offer an introduction to the theories, principles, and applications of the various fields.

PHYSICS

New General Physics Course Offered To Liberal Arts Majors

Curriculum changes in the Physics Department this year allow the non-majors to enroll in a general physics course geared to the liberal arts curriculum. Other changes have broadened the scope of the physics major's education by allowing her to deal with subjects in greater depth and for longer periods of time than was previously possible; thus she is better able to prepare herself for a career in research or in teaching.

Physics 333 students discover the technicalities in electrical transmission.

Professors and students as well engage in research projects to help stimulate undergraduates in their field of biological studies.

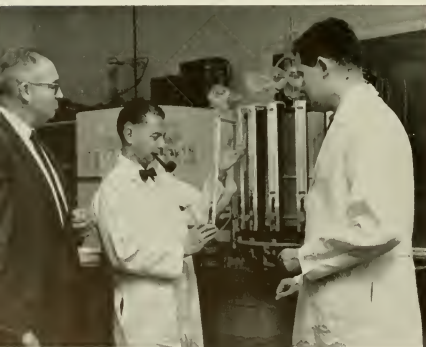

Cutter Memorial Lab provides research and study facilities for advanced biology majors.

BIOLOGY

Research Emphasis Heightens With Attainment Of University Status

Members of the biology faculty utilize facilities of new faculty research center.

One of the most outstanding features of the 1963-64 school year is the laboratory for the research of staff members, set aside and completely remodeled for experimental work in various fields of biology. On the undergraduate scene, Cutter Memorial Lab is now in operation on the fourth floor of the science building where qualified students take special problems and work independently to solve them. Special grants have been received by Doctors Eberhart, Morrison, and Roeder to further their individual research programs; almost every individual in the department is concerned with research that advances the scholarship level of the department and university. Also, at the present time a master's degree program is being instituted and should lead to a more university-like constellation within the department.

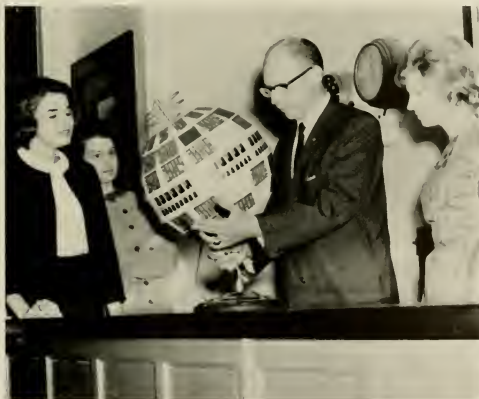

MATHEMATICS

Math Department Prepares Majors For Variety Of Employments

The Department of Mathematics offers modern algebra, advanced calculus, differential equations, statistics, foundations of geometry, and the history of mathematics. Majors from this department go on to graduate study, high school teaching, and into positions as mathematicians with various governmental agencies or industries. Courses are offered which provide opportunities for students from all areas of the campus to gain mathematical experience. New in the curriculum this year is a mathematics course designed especially for prospective elementary teachers.

Square Circle is the math club on campus which carries out a three-fold purpose. It presents aspects of math omitted in the classroom; gives girls with a common interest the opportunity to become better acquainted with each other; and promotes a closer relationship between faculty and students.

Southern Bell's representative for Telstar explains its workings to Square Circle members at one of their monthly meetings.

Mr. Jones shows elementary education majors the concepts of modern mathematics.

There have been two principal new developments in the Department of Psychology during the last year. The National Institute of Mental Health has subsidized undergraduate fellowships in psychology. This year one was awarded to Melissa Galloway who is conducting a research project in the area of division of attention. The department is also in the process of developing a program leading to the master of arts degree in psychology. These plans have meant the acquisition of new apparatus and the improvement of the closed-circuit TV system which has been in use for several years.

Melissa Galloway instructs Lynda Martin in an experiment related to her research project.

PSYCHOLOGY

University Status Brings Plans For Master's Degree In Psychology

Dr. Frances Dunham demonstrates testing materials in her WUNC-TV graduate course "Adolescent Development."

NURSING

Two-Year Program Demanding But Worthwhile To Students

The Department of Nursing presents one of the few college-centered and college-controlled nursing programs available to young women today; it is a two-year program centering around work here at the university and at the Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital. Schedules are tight and demanding, but the level of training being consistent with the university's standards demands this. A student begins actual hospital work within a month of the first day of classes. When these majors graduate and begin hospital work, they live up to the university's and the department's motto "Service" by striving to improve community health levels.

Practical hospital training comes early for the nursing students and proves to be a vital part of their two-year program.

HEALTH

Variety Of Courses Offers Practical Knowledge To Health Students

Associated with the medical services of the university, the Health Department affords students the sort of practical information applicable immediately and throughout their life. Classes in Family, Community, or Child Health as well as Safety and First Aid study the care of the human organism through lectures, practical and laboratory demonstrations, and filmstrips.

Dr. Ellingwood, head of Guilford County Health Department, explains the duties of the Health Department to the visiting UNC-G Community Health class.

HOME ECONOMICS

Graduate, Undergraduate Degrees Offered To Home Ec Majors

Animal experiments give Home Economics majors an opportunity to observe symptoms of classic nutritional conditions produced in the laboratory and to learn about research techniques.

The School of Home Economics provides instruction on both the undergraduate and graduate levels, with courses leading to Bachelor's, Master's, and Doctor's degrees. Options offered by the department include both the professional fields such as clothing and textiles, housing, foods and nutrition, and also a program of home economics education designed for secondary-school teaching. The school requires in addition to its own courses a broad acquaintance with subject matter in the social, biological, and physical sciences and the humanities. The newest major offered is that of Interior Design. The National Society of Interior Designers has a student chapter on this campus which strives for the satisfaction and well-being of the American public and in the promotion of a better way of life.

Home Economics Students test fading scientifically with a clothing fadometer.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT

Nursery School Has Lab Facilities For Child Development Majors

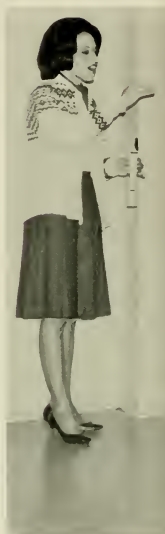

One of the most rapidly expanding majors within the area of home economics is that of Child Development and Family Relations. This work is centered in the classroom and at the UNC-G Nursery School.

To this building the 1963 state legislature provided an addition for use as an infant center. This opportunity for practical application is invaluable for majors, especially doctoral candidates, and serves the community as well.

Appointment Of Dean Howe And Election Of Dr. Edinger

The School of Education includes kindergarten, elementary, and high school facilities which serve as experimental centers for research, curriculum development, observation, and student teaching. Two honors came to the school this year, the first being the appointment of Dean Kenneth Howe by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education for a one-month study tour of higher education in India, with particular emphasis on the education of teachers. The second honor was the election of Dr. Lois Edinger, a member of the faculty, as President-Elect of the National Education Association, the world's largest professional organization. For prospective teachers both A.C.E.T. and S.N.E.A. are professional organizations in which majors can learn more about their chosen profession and have the opportunity for association with well-known educators.

Mrs. Johnson helps prospective teachers discover up-to-date literature and textbooks in the Curriculum Materials Center.

COMMERCIAL AND BUSINESS EDUCATION

Two Courses Of Study Open To Secretaries And Business Majors

Housed primarily in the Forney building, the Departments of Business Education and the One-Year Commercial Course equip their students for careers in secretarial administration, merchandising, and business education with bachelor of science degrees or certificates.

Volleyball is only one of the many courses open to non-majors.

Both beginning and intermediate tennis instruction is available for freshmen and sophomores.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Physical Education Majors Offered Two Levels Of Study

In addition to providing four semesters of required physical education to all students, this department offers a specialized major on both the undergraduate and graduate levels. This major requires broad study in all fields related to it.

The first-semester junior major defines and directs her study to one of the many sequences in the program: teacher or dance education, recreation in physical education, corrective physical education or dance performance.

Physical education majors learn exercises for physical fitness as a part of their extensive training.

Field hockey and basketball are popular elective courses and also receive enthusiastic participation in both intra- and extra-mural competition.

Variety Of Recreational Courses, Facilities Open To All Students

The university's 9-hole golf course serves as a practice field for golf students both in class and out.

Piney Lake provides a recreation area for all students of the university as well as an instructional area for the physical education department.

The department offers a wide range of courses to both majors and non-majors. Freshmen and Sophomore electives include such standards as tennis, swimming, and golf at all levels, but also such varied activities as bowling, modern dance, fencing, archery, and lacrosse. There are, also, specialized programs for commercial and nursing students, designed to fit and complement both their schedules and needs. Majors are provided with several semesters of block work in all fields and with a sequence of courses oriented to her option in the department. Also operated by this staff is the recreation center Piney Lake; here are located camp sites, a lake for boating and swimming, a log cabin, two houses, a recreation hall, and picnic facilities.

The Modern Dance Group under the direction of Miss Moomaw participates in campus theatre productions and also presents annual recitals.

R. A. Encourages Dorm Participation In Sports

The Recreation Association exists for the purpose of integrating and encouraging participation in extracurricular physical education groups and clubs. It sponsors inter-dorm competition in the areas of basketball and volleyball; these games are always a point of dorm rapport for those who participate. Members of R.A. plan extra-murals in basketball and organize field trips for synchronized swim teams and workshops; they work for the success of every conference, workshop, and play-day scheduled on this campus. Another branch of R.A. is the performing dance groups — the Modern Dance Club and the Tap Club — which present annual recitals and seasonal programs.

Students And Guests Utilize Department's Recreational Facilities

The Recreation Association and the Department of Physical Education are responsible for the facilities available for student dates and parties and for such entertainment as the annual Dolphin-Seal Pageant. Each Saturday the general gameroom in Rosenthal Gym, the bowling lanes in Coleman, and the golf course are open to UNC-G students and their guests. Equipment is provided, and any requested help is on call. The Dolphin-Seal Club is devoted to the perfection and performance of synchronized swimming and presents a recital to the general public and the campus each year. The performance this year was planned around a toy-shop theme, and presented members in swim routines based on storybook themes and characters. Costuming lent a completely charming air to the evening, and the audience was enchanted by the group's ability and coordination.

UNC-G students and their dates find campus bowling lanes most economical and convenient.

The billiard tables prove an ever-popular spot with the boys and thus heighten the girls' interests as well.

Dorms Serve As Nucleus For Student Life At UNC-G

Student life begins, culminates, and ends within the halls of the dorms. It is here that friendships are formed, renewed, and broken. It is here that girls share a secret dream, a fear, or perhaps a boy. The necessity to cooperate, the ability to understand, and the willingness to mature become a part of living with others. The individual dorms and halls develop family units. Within this family girls study, relax, gossip, laugh, and cry. With this family girls find time for fun and work. The girls who emerge from these dorms are rapidly caught in the swirl of activities and campus life. It is, however, their dorm and their new family that are not forgotten.

Happiness is having a friend you can talk to.

"I just don't know if I agree with this author."

There comes a time when fun and games must cease.

Sometimes it begins to get us down.

Term papers and book reviews, lab reports and math problems — the studying that is required and the individual quest for knowledge — the “sophomore slump” that inevitably comes — though not necessarily in our sophomore year — the striving for QP’s and the inspirations that move us to our best are very much a part of the trials and tribulations of studying. Sometimes we have non-academic frustrations . . . like a broken candy machine; sometimes our minds wander and concentration seems impossible; and then a quick bridge game or plain goofing-off releases our tensions. An occasional letter or phone call is the bulwark of our every day struggle for knowledge.

A letter sure does cheer up the day.

Our telephones are a Pandora's box of misery and happiness.

We can't study all the time!

Candy machines . . . the monsters that take our money and keep the candy.

Too many cooks . . . ?

Well, I can think of better things to do.

Another side of dorm life is the companionship and fun it offers. Who has not passed by the kitchen and smelled a pizza or popcorn cooking? A part of each day is usually spent discussing anything from world events, Existentialism, art, and books to the Beatles; from the latest dance steps or hairdos and boys, to that "horrible history quiz." Relaxing moments are spent in spontaneous hootenannies and informal parties. There are also the necessary chores such as cleaning, washing, and ironing which cannot be overlooked in our complex dorm life.

Room inspections always come at the most inopportune time.

Dorm sings . . . quad sings . . . room sings — the most popular pastime.

The enthusiasm of students for Christmas at school is reflected in the Secret Santa tradition.

After all, we only have four days before Christmas.

Inspiration waits in the hushed stillness of nature.

An apple a day keeps the doctor away . . . we hope.

Arriving at the corner bus stop three minutes late is one more common bond for UNC-G students.

What would we do without the U.S. mail?

The serene atmosphere of Peabody Park provides a contrast to the hurried activities of dorm life.

Frequently, we need to get away from our existence in the dorm. Even a trip to the corner for groceries or downtown shopping often provides just the needed break. Elliott Hall's Tuesday Teas have a large and faithful following. We sometimes enjoy a coke in the soda shop or ice cream at the Yum-Yum. A brisk game of tennis, a cool swim, or a dorm sports event brings enthusiasm and a release from tension. Peabody Park provides a quiet place for study and enjoyment. When things get rough, one might find us gazing out a window in a daydream or perhaps just quietly thinking.

Alice in Wonderland had nothing on us — Tea every Tuesday.

Wouldn't make any difference to us if we had three feet of snow!

It's raining . . . it's pouring . . . and we get up anyway.

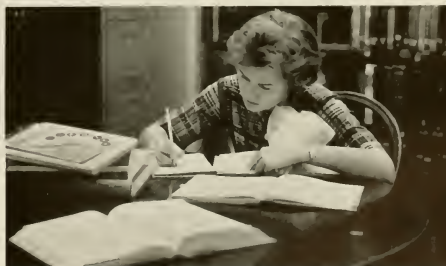

Sometimes we daydream . . .

Despite the fact that we often forget it our sojourn on this campus is essentially one of a studious nature. On week-days the massive upheaval on the hour complemented by the lonely stragglers late for a thousand varied reasons presents that part of our existence founded in the classroom. Through the humid days of September, the picturesque days of autumn, the bitter freezing days of winter, the innumerable days of rain, and the unbearably lovely days of spring we walk with notebooks in hand to learn. We manage to spend a part of our time studying in the library, in research, or perhaps in daydreaming about what lies ahead. We look always to find ourselves in this knowledgeable world of which we are becoming a part.

The stacks provide us with solitude and information.

"At least I won't have to eat in the dining hall tonight."

"He's waiting in the parlor and he's cute!"

Advocates of a co-ed system find few complaints on the campus, as each week-end invariably brings a fair share of men into our midst. As if by prearranged signals, their arrival hails a certain vivacity and a reawakening of that coquettish quality inherent in every female. We spend hours deciding which color looks best; consulting neighbors for advice; and borrowing clothes, jewelry, or spray starch. We who flatter ourselves as being members of the intelligentsia scarcely resemble this group with our inability to decide whether or not to wear bangs. We scheme, we connive, we coyly hint for dinner at the Plantation or the Jokers. Back in our rooms, we share happy experiences or cry over disappointments; it is always the same.

Since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary . . .

Couples pause for refreshment amid the music and excitement of the Christmas Ball.

Manners and excitement ride high as couples don their finest clothes for the Fall Formals.

Candlelight adds to the atmosphere of "Romance" at any dance.

A major part of campus social life is centered in Elliott Hall, the modern, well-equipped student activity center. Miss Prondecki and the Elliott Hall Council coordinate its sponsored events which range from combo dances and the formal Elliott Hall Ball to Tuesday Teas, fashion shows and Sunday night movies. Informal lectures are often given in the comfortable lounges, and the lobby always displays impressive art exhibits from local and national artists.

Campus Fellowship Group

Despite popular belief, religion does play an important role in the life of a college woman.

"Sunday Brunch" provides food, fun, and fellowship for members of Hillel.

Strive To Combine Religion And Education For University Students

Students at UNC-G are encouraged to identify themselves with an organized church group which sponsors in addition to their regular programs of worship, campus fellowship groups. The Episcopal, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches have student centers within easy walking distance of all parts of the campus and provide regular weekly programs within their student centers. In addition to a weekly informal supper-fellowship and study group, these four denominations present lectures and movies to the campus as a whole throughout the school year. Other groups on the campus follow much the same program. All of them — Hillel, Lutheran Students' Association, United Campus Christian Fellowship, Christian Science Organization, Newman Club, Carolina Christian Fellowship and the Moravian Fellowship — endeavor to bring the students' religious lives into a common bond with the university.

The Lutheran Student Association and Gamma Delta join together for Christmas caroling.

Co-ed church-sponsored activities often spark increased enthusiasm among even the regular members of the groups.

In addition to individual worship, fellowship, and instructional programs, the religious organizations on campus participate in the Interfaith Council. This group, with Dean Katherine Taylor as its coordinator, is composed of student representatives from each of the church organizations, and its main goal is the promotion of a better understanding of all faiths. These groups, through the Interfaith Council, unite the campus in various ways throughout the year. Each Christmas a Lovefeast and Candlelight service is sponsored, a Moravian traditional service commemorating the birth of Christ and designed for promoting love and brotherhood among all believers. This service is followed by caroling on the Elliott Hall patio. An Easter Sunrise Service is also sponsored by the Council and this year an exhibition of religious art from the Smithsonian Institution was presented in the Weatherspoon Gallery.

Sunday mornings find church-sponsored buses waiting to carry girls to the church of their choice.

The Canterbury Club for Episcopal Students holds an informal meeting with their advisor the Reverend David Guthrie.

Weekly Student Newspaper Ferrets News To Keep Campus Informed

Editorial Staff — (top to bottom) Judy Sanford, Copy Editor; Barbara Wilkinson, Assistant Editor; Diane Oliver, Managing Editor; Carole Southerland, News Editor.

Getting the Carolinian off to press on schedule calls for work lasting well into Monday night for Editor Winston and her staff. Horizontal captions which simply will not fit into vertical spaces, numerous trips to the soda shop for two-cent cups of water (until the staff finally buys its own supply of paper cups), and rapidly filled ash trays as panic mounts over making up the front page are reoccurrences each time the "Cary" goes to press.

The Carolinian has a double function: the reporting of campus news and the presentation and interpretation of campus opinion. The newspaper is a completely student-written, student-edited, and student-managed publication which appears weekly.

Coraddi Publishes Campus Literary Efforts

The Coraddi is the fine arts magazine on campus which gives all UNC-G students an equal opportunity to contribute their original poetry, short stories, and art work. Under the general editorship of Tina Hillquist, who is assisted by Art Editor Lealan Nunn, the Coraddi is published four times during the school year. The staff spends a great deal of time evaluating and criticizing student submissions in order to present the best material in the magazine. One of its most rewarding services is its sponsorship of the Arts Festival in the spring which this year brought to the campus Fred Chappell, Poet and Duke professor, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Robert Lowell, and Elizabeth Hardwick (Mrs. Robert Lowell) Advisory Editor to The New York Book Review.

1963 PINE NEEDLES Wins All-American—Challenges '64 Staff

Challenged by the 1963 Pine Needles' All-American rating this year's staff worked extra hard to meet and hopefully surpass its predecessors. For the first time the staff had an advisor to work with, and Mrs. Mary Hunter was always on hand whenever needed to help out with the details. Nancy and "Charlie" served as right-hands to Brenda as they worked on the opening section, layouts, picture schedules, and helped make the numerous decisions which must go into publishing a yearbook. Susie worked under great pressure and still came through on top with the page after page of copy assignments. Arden and Pete explored student life on campus in order to give a fuller picture of it in the yearbook. Ida spent long hours selling ads and drawing up layouts for her section making sure that it was highlighted by interesting informals. Deadlines arrived and it was with much anticipation that the staff awaited the arrival of the result of their long hours of hard work which they hoped would present a true picture of the year 1963-64 at UNC-G.

The Young Democrats actively seek to stimulate interest in the government at both the national and state levels, and to acquaint students with the issues and the candidates. Their fall meetings presented programs about the ideals and principles as well as the history of the Democratic party. This orientation provided a foundation for members to develop their own political philosophies.

The basic objectives of the Young Republicans are to educate members in the principles of the Republican party and to provide an opportunity for stimulating campus political activity. Noted political figures are often invited to speak to club members; these informal lectures are open to all students. Through joint meetings with other chapters in the state, this club seeks to build better citizens through political awareness.

Young Republicans take a random sampling survey of campus opinion on world political activity.

Political Clubs Serve To Stimulate Students, Build Better Citizens

N.S.A. Materializes Rides Board Plans As A Student Service

The National Student Association serves as a link between our campus and the other campuses of our country. It gives us meaning in a wider frame of reference than does any other single organization on our campus. Moreover, its sole purpose is to serve the student body of this campus, and to broaden its horizons. NSA's projects for this year included a "See Europe Night" designed to familiarize UNC-G students with contemporary Europe as available to us, and to foster interest and participation in the variously sponsored summer tours in Europe. During this year, NSA sponsored the placement of a Rides Board in Elliott Hall, a service to students needing a lift from school to some N. C. destination within zoned areas of the board and for those wanting riders to these areas. Delegations were sent, also, to the Model United National General Assembly.

Service League Bases Its Functions On The Principle Of Service

Providing Christmas gifts for needy families is one of the important contributions of Service League. Chairman Judy Tripp (center) supervises the wrapping.

Service League has a unique place on our campus; it is the only organization which functions solely to help others. Purse Drive is the major fund-raising project; money from this goes to the Foreign students' fund, World University Service, and other organizations. The main portion of the drive is a tremendous Halloween Carnival on October 31 which this year proved more successful than ever. Each Christmas, Service League sponsors a clothing drive, the results of which go to a needy family in this area through the cooperation of the Welfare Board. Dorms may also, if they desire, sponsor a Christmas for a needy family; in such a case the dorm collects money, food, gifts, and other items, which go to a specific family whose needs are posted in the dorms. This proved to be a completely successful and heart-warming project this year.

Around the World in One Evening is provided by the National Student Association's "See Europe Night."

The NSA Rides Board in Elliott Hall helps students get together to solve their transportation problems.

Inter-Class Council Unites Classes And Aids Communication

Inter-Class Council exists on this campus to coordinate the needs of the unified student body and the separate classes. Representatives from each class sit on the council-board, and the result is an integrated and smoothly-functioning group. It is this council which sponsors the Inter-Class Council Scholarship Fund awarded each year to an incoming freshman. Each class is assigned a monetary goal and the success of the fund depends on the success of the individual classes in reaching this goal. The Council also sponsors an "Elections Rally" in the spring, just before the first S.G.A. election to inform and interest all classes in this portion of our campus life.

The Inter-Class Council, made up of all the club and class presidents on campus, held their September workshop under the leadership of their president, Sharon Bristol.

Everywhere we look, Green Jackets!

Traditional Jester Day skit draws large and appreciative audience.

Jester Day Co-Chairmen

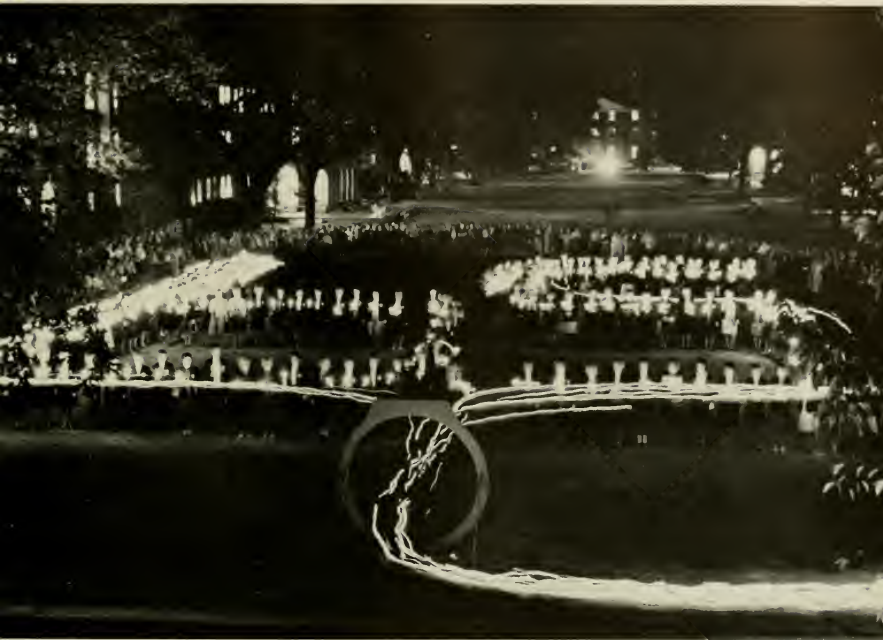

Jesters Join The Excitement And Bow To The Green Jackets

Jacket Day proves one thing every year — clothes make the girl! With the arrival of their class blazers, the Sophomores take their place at last on the color-pole of UNC-G; they grow at least three inches taller, and smiles blossom all over campus.

The Class of '67, however, greeted these new arrivals less enthusiastically. Traditionally, Jacket Day is the prophet of Jester Day. First warnings take the form of a sophomore parade around the quad and a stampede through freshmen dorms. The coming of the day is heralded by the cheery intercom announcement at 6 a.m. that it is time to get up, after which the semi-conscious freshmen are rushed to the quad for instructions. Primarily, their duties are two: complete a dorm project for presentation at court that evening, and serve the honorable sophomores throughout the day. Despite everything, or because of it, the day ends with a new closeness between the two classes.

Reverence and honor to the mighty Sophomores is the order of the day.

As the climax for the Ring Ceremony the Juniors solemnly form their year '65 in candlelight.

Juniors Proudly Display Class Rings In An Impressive Ceremony

Symbol of the coming of age at UNC-G — the giant ring frames Chairman Ann Beaver during the candlelight ceremony.

The Junior Class marched from Aycock to the quad and lit their candles; a double line was formed, and as the class filed through the giant ring the stillness rang with the Sister Class and College songs. From the quiet that followed came the words “into ’65 ride the 600.” This was a time to think, a time to wonder about the future, and a time to be proud of having achieved upperclassmen status at UNC-G.

"It Is Here In Our Hearts, O Sisters Dear"

Writer and Director Joan Donahue and Stage Manager Kay Smathers spent many long rehearsal hours getting the Junior Show in shape.

The Sister-Class system on campus unites the alternate individual classes into a strong bond of friendship which is strengthened by sister class parties, programs, and the ever-popular Junior Show presented annually by the Junior Class. The Class of 1965 this year presented a musical "The Better Life" which was written and directed by Joan Donahue. The cast was made up of over one-third of the members of the Junior Class and included an orchestra of twenty-four.

This bond of closeness between classes is cemented by the often-heard and ever-familiar words of the Sister Song "... It is here in our hearts, O sisters dear, ... We love college and that means you."

Class spirit was shown by all as over one-third of the Junior Class participated in the traditional production.

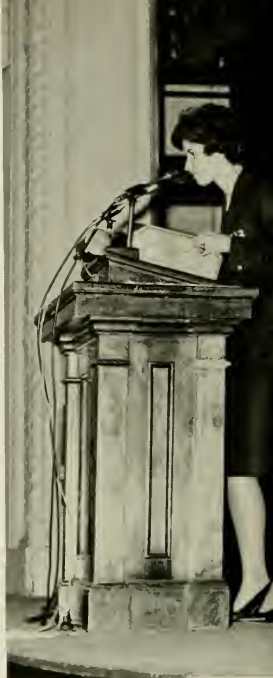

Class officers conduct the individual class meetings during which class projects and future plans are discussed and action is taken.

Campus Hootenannies boost school spirit and provide fun for all.

Perhaps the high point of student enthusiasm for the Student Government Association occurs during the annual elections for the student body officers. After nominations and candidate briefings, campaigns begin. Each aspirant has a platform, a theory, a campaign manager, and high hopes. Tensions rise after the elections convocation where all major campus-office candidates are introduced and present a statement of their campaign aims and promises. Rallies and teas in the dorms provide a more informal introduction to these candidates, and on election day the proof of the pudding is made. . . . There are two such elections in the spring — the first for major campus positions and Junior House Presidents, the second for class officers, marshals, and representatives to various bodies. And then, there are the presidential appointments to those offices for whom there were no candidates.

Competition, Hopes Run High During Campus Elections

True to form, campaign posters attract students' attention and hopefully their votes.

Upholding UNC-G tradition, the entire student body gathers in Aycock Auditorium for the mass meetings. An important part of Student Government, they are led by the SGA officers.

The Student Government Association is the students' self-governing organization at UNC-G of which all students are members. S.G.A. sponsors a pre-school conference in September to discuss plans for the forthcoming year establishing workshops representing the committees and the three main governmental branches. These workshops give students the opportunity to learn and ask questions concerning particular phases of student government and to give their own opinions concerning its operations. The Executive Cabinet is headed by the president and is made up of the student government officers, class presidents, and presidents of the campus organizations; it serves as an advisory board for student government and correlates the activities of the different organizations.

For Changes

During 1963-64 the executive branch worked with house presidents to unify dorm policies; with the editors of the three campus publications for the formulation of a Publications Board; and established Freshman Cabinet as a leadership-training program. This latter accomplishment familiarizes interested freshmen with the inner workings of student government and gives them experience in serving in various capacities from time to time and thereby training them as prospective candidates for S.G.A. offices.

Two major branches compose the S.G.A. judicial system: the Honor Court and the Court of Social Regulations. Honor Court's main function is to make students aware of the importance of the Honor Policy and to hear cases of students who have violated the Honor Code. The Court of Social Regulations deals with major infractions of the campus social rules. Hall Board is a division of the Court of Social Regulations consisting of four dorm members and a member of the Social Court; it deals with minor social offenses. Changes this year have included the rotation of court members, the establishment of a Court of Appeals, the revision of the stated rights of the accused, and a revision of the blanket search policy; two open trials have been held to acquaint students with the court procedures.

Ad Hoc Committees Formed To Aid Legislative Body

The Legislature, a branch of the Student Government Association, entrusted with the formulation of campus regulations for submission to the administration, found itself quite successful during 1963-64. Perhaps the most notable achievement in terms of campus approval is the extension of Saturday-night dorm closings until one o'clock, instead of the time-honored midnight hour. There occurred also a striking example of campus approval with the removal of The Red Door from the campus, a somewhat requisite action if state law were to be upheld. The formation of Ad Hoc committees to aid the legislature in evaluating which rulings are necessary proved an asset to the rule-making body.

Among the advantages of being a town student are access to a car and having all the conveniences of home. But the Town Students' Association works to make students who live off campus an integral part of on-campus activities. Town students have the same opportunities for participation in school events and Student Government as dorm students, and many of them take an active part in school-wide and class activities. Their lounge in Elliott Hall provides a comfortable place to relax, study, or just "get-together." They are encouraged to join campus organizations, and are becoming increasingly aware of their double advantage.

Town Students work on Christmas project to aid a needy family in the comfort of their lounge in Elliott Hall.

Council, Candidates, And Student Body Make C. U. Day A Success

Chapel Hill is the scene of the year's first Consolidated University Day attended by students from all three branches. It begins with the State-Carolina football game, reaches a peak of suspense with the crowning of the C.U. queen, and ends with an informal combo dance enjoyed by all attending.

The Consolidated University Council plans this event and two more such days held at the Greensboro and Raleigh branches during second semester. The Council, not just a social committee, also meets to discuss and plan courses of action for events and problems that affect all three branches of the University of North Carolina.

Beauties Serve Classes As One Representative Of Ideal Woman

Election of campus beauties results in a bevy of nine undergraduates, each with her own personal brand of charm. The girls are chosen to represent each of the four classes as well as the nursing and the commercial classes, and ultimately the Pine Needles itself. Although each one holds a distinctive claim to beauty, their fields of study and hobbies are as varied as their individual ambitions. Majors range from elementary education to interior design and sociology; hobbies vary from art to music and writing. Kimio Eto plays the Koto for Suzushi Hanayagi during their UNC-G appearance while on their first transcontinental tour of the United States.

Each year the Lecture-Entertainment Committee brings to the campus a variety of artistic programs designed to broaden the intellectual and cultural horizons of the students. During 1963-64 the committee cooperated with the Department of Drama in bringing the National Repertory Theatre to campus. UNC-G students were also privileged to see a performance by Kimio Eto, the greatest living master of the thirteen-stringed instrument of Japan, and Suzushi Hanayagi, a dancer in the Japanese classical and Kabuki theatre style. Following this performance was a presentation of the Daniel Nagrin and Helen Tamiris Dance Company who revealed to the audience the power inherent in the modern dance form. In the spring the National Players of Washington presented The Taming of the Shrew, and the committee also sponsored an all-star company of Korean musicians and dancers on their first American tour.

Preceding Daniel Nagrin, Helen Tamiris, and Company was Myra Kinch and Company shown here in a scene from The Light Fantastic.

With Eyes On The Future Seniors Look Past Graduation

We face graduation with our eyes on the future, straining to see what may lie there for us. For some there is the excitement and the happiness of marriage; for others, job interviews mark the beginning of careers for which we have been preparing for four years; for many, there is the combination of the two. We move forward into the future, but in our hearts will always ring the old familiar words "... We never shall forget the gratitude we owe to you — a never-ending debt ..."

Diamonds replacing class rings --- a sure sign that spring is in the air and graduation near.

Job interviews, conducted by Mrs. Schaeffer in the Placement Office, aid in solving the problem of post-graduate employment.

Daisy Chain — one sister-generation ends,

Pomp And Circumstance In

Commencement exercises opened on Saturday, June 1, 1963, on the front campus of the University with the Senior Class Day Program at which the Sophomores paid their last tribute to their Sister Class with the traditional daisy chain. The highlight of this program was the announcement of the outstanding seniors. Other events of the day included the Chancellor's reception and an evening concert presented by the Chamber Music Players and the University Chorale.

Sunday, June 2, found the Seniors gathered in the Coliseum. Rev. W. E. Wisseman gave the invocation, and Dr. Arthur Larson, professor of law at Duke University, delivered the commencement address after which Governor Terry Sanford, President William Friday and Chancellor Otis Singletary spoke and conferred the degrees.

This woman that we are is reflected in THE INDIVIDUALS which make up our student body. Each must express her own ideas and opinions, her likes and dislikes. Though she is an integral part of a group, its purpose is never to stifle her individuality; it benefits from her uniqueness. As an individual, she works, plays, plans her future, lives her present, and gives of herself to this university thus earning her individual place in the society of today.

TERRY SANFORD. Governor of North Carolina and Chairman, ex officio, of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University and WILLIAM C. FRIDAY. President of The Consolidated University.

As an official of the University, the Chancellor has an additional responsibility to students.

Leadership is as vital to a college as it is to a corporation or a country. Unless its guiding officials are an outstanding combination of knowledge, organizational ability, concern for student and faculty, dedication, and practical experience, the college itself has little chance of becoming outstanding. We at UNC-G have been more than fortunate in having as our chancellor a man who possesses not only these qualities but adds to them those resulting from a variety of interests and achievements. An honored and welcome sight on our campus, Chancellor Singletary has given us the leadership we need to assume and hold our place in the University complex.

Varying Facets Of Chancellor's Character Combined In UNC-G Role

The Chancellor manifests success as an author.

Professor Singletary specializes in Civil War and Reconstruction.

Also a private citizen, Dr. Otis Singletary enjoys an M-G drive with Mrs. Singletary.

Administration

KATHERINE TAYLOR
Dean of Students

MEREB E. MOSSMAN
Dean of the University

Deans occupy a potentially unpleasant position in college administration. They must weigh and make decisions on complaints, and many types of problems from students, faculty, and the administration itself. They cannot move forward for the college without the individuals of the campus. In quiet and in dignity, our Deans have maintained this balance between college and campus, and have in addition, provided us with a projection of ourselves in full maturity and an ideal for the present.

Responsibilities And Privileges — A Yearly Prelude To Graduation

Seniors sometimes find more responsibility than fun in their car privileges.

The Senior Class devoted most of its spare time and energy to preparing for graduation. Invitations Chairman, Class Day Chairman and speaker, and Outstanding Seniors had to be chosen. Raising funds for the Interclass Scholarship was another class project.

Many memories came to mind as May 31 approached . . . the first Class meeting, Talent Show, and S.G.A. elections were reminders of the freshman year . . . Rat Day and class blazers highlighted Sophomore year . . . the Junior Show, Sister Class parties, arrival of class rings provided a few remembrances of the immediate past.

With Senior status came many new responsibilities, as well as privileges which included cars on campus and more social freedom. Pride and a feeling of accomplishment as four years' hard work culminated in graduation enveloped all the class members, as the goal was finally realized.

Senior Patty Bryan has learned the value of relaxation during the frustration-filled moving days.

Permission slips provide no problems for Seniors — another privilege envied by underclassmen.

Senior House Presidents And Counselors

Much of the responsibility for coordinating the activities of the upperclassmen dorms rests in the hands of the Senior House Presidents. These girls are elected from their dorms in the first S.G.A. elections.

Some of their duties include presiding over Hall Boards and House Meetings, locking the dorms, and supervising the paid hostesses. Working with their house counselors and the S.G.A., they present the girls in their dorms with the latest information concerning rules, and various organizations and activities on campus. As chairmen of the various committees in the dorms, they coordinate and regulate functions and activities. There are many responsibilities involved, but the rewards in terms of accomplishment and experience are great.

Class Rings Help Remind Juniors Of Senior-Year Responsibilities

Much was accomplished this year through the energy and industry of the Junior class. Raising money for senior year was the primary activity; the class sold tickets to Coliseum events and candy over Christmas vacation to help themselves in this area. Another important project was the Junior Show, given in February. Sister-class parties and Sister Day were also very exciting and rewarding events during the year. The Juniors published their own newspaper this year, The Junior Progressive, which contained editorials and class news. The rings which the Juniors received symbolized all that had been accomplished, and also served to remind them of goals still to be attained. As work on their majors progressed, they realized how close graduation really was and how much had been gained in the preceding two years.

Junior House Presidents And Counselors

Each spring the sophomore class elects several girls to serve as Junior House Presidents in the freshman dorms the next year. Their duties begin by sending welcome letters to incoming freshmen and continue through the year in cooperation with the house counselors as they preside at house meetings, check and file permission slips, lock the dorms, and inform the girls in their dorms of campus events. The duties end as the freshmen become sophomores and they, seniors. They are friends and advisors and their rewards are many.

Sophomores Find Themselves One Step Nearer Graduation

Pete Cook and Barbara Gegenheimer,
Sophomores, extend a UNC-G welcome to Justice Goldberg.

With pride the sophomores realized they were one step nearer their goal of graduation. This was a year of changes, added responsibilities and privileges. Green class blazers became their symbol and the emblems were a nostalgic reminder that the sophomores were no longer a part of Woman's College, but now belong to UNC-G. Some of the privileges sophomores acquired were moving from the "quad" into upperclassmen dorms, unlimited class cuts, and more social freedom; their responsibilities to the college increased proportionately. One of the most meaningful events of the year was "Jester Day," formerly known as "Hats Off Day." Sponsored by sophomores for freshmen, it was fun for all involved and served to unify the classes.

Freshmen participate in the first of their class elections.

This year's freshman class was unique in many ways. The largest freshman class in the school's history, it was also the first freshman class to register as students of UNC-G. After a week of orientation, freshmen began to discover that college life was not all meetings and filling out forms. Of course there were the usual complaints about lights-out, fire drills at midnight, dining hall food, and exams, but freshmen soon adjusted to these things and found a place of their own on campus. Class meetings, elections, the talent show, and various other activities unified the class. Jester Day and sister-class parties brought freshmen closer to upperclassmen. It was a wonderful first year, but the freshmen eagerly looked forward to becoming sophomores and accepting upperclassman responsibilities.

UNC-G Freshmen Enter A New Life With Spirit And Enthusiasm

Hospital Practice Reinforces Classroom Theory In Nursing Program

Work of the nursing students in the two year program was centered around Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital where the students meet their first patients. Picnics, class meetings, and various informative speakers all added much to the year. The reward at the end of two years is more than receiving a degree and becoming a Registered Nurse, but is also the ability to help meet the physical and emotional needs of human beings.

Nursing Students spread the Christmas spirit as they carol at the Moses H. Cone Hospital.

STUDENT NURSING ASSOCIATION COORDINATORS are Bobbie Bing and Zade Garvin.

Nursing Graduates Urged To Combine "Service With Wisdom"

Two years of theory and practice supervised by the UNC-G department of Nursing, Cone Memorial Hospital and the John Umstead Hospital lead to graduation with an Associate Degree in Nursing. The 1963 ceremony included short addresses, presentation of the Moses H. Cone award, and the conferring of these degrees. Ann M. Jacobansky, Dean of Duke University Medical Center School of Nursing delivered the major address, an evaluation of nursing in our world. Miss Virginia Mims was recognized by the award as the outstanding graduate; the Chancellor, Dean Mossman, and Miss Alice Boehret, head of the School of Nursing, conferred all degrees.

Children of a nursing graduate accompany their mother to the reception following the ceremony.

Diplomas reward nursing students for two years of study.

After Graduation ceremonies, these former nursing students take time to celebrate.

Commercial Students Spend Year Acquiring Requisite Business Skills

Carlanne Foushee and Becky Cain check the efficiency of Suzy Hales' touch typing.

Arduous hours in Forney and various class activities will highlight the memories of this year's Commercial students. As in years past, the commercials could be recognized by their white jackets. Commercial students aim to become informed, efficient women of the business world. Some will become secretaries; others may prove to be of great assistance in their husbands' business someday, but all will have profited in some way from their year at UNC-G.

Forney lounge offers business majors a relaxing and refreshing atmosphere.

Graduation Culminates Year's Preparation For Business Positions

Opening the college's 71st commencement weekend, the commercial course's exercises graduated 104 students. The department head, Dr. Roscoe J. Allen, presided over the ceremony, which was held at 11 a.m. on May 31, 1963, in Elliott Ballroom. After the devotional, led by Rev. Allen C. McSwen of Starmount Presbyterian Church, addresses were presented by Patricia Estridge, the Class President and spokesman, and Chancellor Otis A. Singletary. Chancellor Singletary and Dean of the Faculty Merib E. Mossman awarded the certificates to each member of the commercial graduating class. These young ladies are now members of the modern business community and will serve as examples for students in subsequent classes.

University officials participate in 1963 commercial commencement.

Commercial class opens commencement exercises with procession.

THE EDITOR NOTES...

It was with much anticipation that I undertook the editorship of the 1964 Pine Needles last spring and began the planning which has led to the yearbook which you now hold. In the process of this planning a great transition took place on our campus which involved much more than a name change, for we had at last attained university status and would in the near future become a coed institution. It was with this latter fact in mind that the staff chose to take advantage of our last year as a girls' school and dedicate the book to Woman as we see her on our campus. Summer hours were spent reading and researching on the topic and when September came we were able to compile a questionnaire on woman and her general characteristics which was then sent to about five hundred students on this campus, and it was from this source that we related "Woman" to our campus. Our aim has been to talk about woman in our theme, put her into the student life on the campus, and finally to show through the class sections the individuals which go into the makeup of this woman. Academics, organizations, and special events have all been included in the much-expanded student life section of which they are so vitally a part. Departmental clubs have been more closely related to their respective departments, and we have attempted to note the academic improvements which will result from our new status.

No book can be published by only one person, and I have many staff members to thank for the help they have given me:

Mrs. Mary Hunter — who has been both an advisor and a friend to me and helped in so many little ways to make decisions.

Ida Smyer — for the financial advice which I so sorely needed and for so ably handling the advertising section.

Nancy Price — to whom credit for the main of the research on our theme goes and for the compilation of the questionnaires, and the actual work of these pages.

Nancy Stallings — as Managing Editor she handled picture schedules and spent many willing hours on other aspects of the book.

Susie Newman and her Literary Staff — for being so patient with me and working under tight schedules to get the copy ready.

Sue Richardson — who spent many hours working with department heads and professors to present a true and meaningful picture of the academic life on our campus.

Pete Cook and Arden Nelson — for their long hours, careful planning, and good ideas on Student Life at UNC-G.

Ann Beatty, Carol Berlin, Virginia Lowe, Barbara Massel, Bobbie Mullis, and Carole Whedbee — who assisted me in so many ways even after having completed their own individual sections.

On campus a word of thanks must also go to Chancellor Singletary and Dean Taylor for their support and cooperation; to Miss Patterson for her financial and "legal" advice; to Miss Prondecki and her staff for being so cooperative and willing to help in Elliott Hall; to Mr. Wilkinson, Mrs. Alspaugh and the News Bureau for their picture files and ready assistance on photography.

Deep appreciation on my part and heart-felt thanks go the following: Mr. Ralph Van Dyke, Miss Molly Flanders and the others at Jahn & Ollier who worked so hard to fulfill our wishes and cooperate with us; Mr. Frank Fleming and Washburn Printing Company for their never-ending advice and especially their patience; Mr. Fay Smith and his photographers Mr. Harrison Scott and Mr. Richard Byrd at Smith Studio for providing us so efficiently with class pictures, despite our mixed-up schedules; Mr. Carroll Martin and Mr. Malcolm Miller of Martin Studio for many of our student life and group pictures as well as those of the administration; Mr. E. L. Thomas who came so willingly on short notice to take candids for us.

It has been a rich and rewarding experience to have edited the last yearbook which this university will have as an all-girls' school. It is now completed, and it is with continued anticipation that I await your reactions to it. Our motto for the year has been "anything worth doing is worth doing well." The staff hopes that we have carried out this motto and presented to you a true and memorable story of the year 1963-64 at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.
